Electric Motion Signs.

The junior member of a big electrical sign construction company was walking along Broadway with a friend after the theater. He nodded his head toward one of the blazing advertising displays in which a horse appears on the gallop.

"Has it ever occurred to you how detailed must be the work of the sign builder to represent the movements of living beings in bulbs and make them artistically realistic? We have to go far afield sometimes to obtain the life-like effect. That horse, for example, plants his hoofs just as in real life; otherwise that sign would be an animated cartoon. Now, to get the individual or disjointed movements of the legs in their order of sequence the builder minded that the eye of the camera is keener than man's, procured the motion picture film of a galloping horse and examining each snapshot, drew his plans in duplicate. Flashing his bulbs on and off with the same speed employed by a movie operator, the designer has produced the effect of smooth and continuous motion."—New York Sun.

His Only Subject.

Mr. van Vorst in a recent book tells a story of a dinner at Chicago given by the ambitious wife of a millionaire tanner. The lady noticed, to her annoyance, that her husband did not speak a word to their smart guests, and when she got an opportunity she whispered angrily, "Why don't you talk?"

"What's the good?" replied the tanner contemptuously. "There ain't one of 'em as knows a thing about leather."
